NEW ADJUNCT FACULTY

Michael Burbach will teach Securities Regulations next spring. Mr. Burbach is employed at Security Benefit as 2nd Vice President, Assistant General Counsel, Director – Legal & Compliance, Investments. He is an experienced securities and financial regulatory counsel with broad industry knowledge related to compliance, registration, asset management, trading, and derivatives. Mr. Burbach received his LL.M. with Distinction from Georgetown University Law Center, his J.D. from Washburn University School of Law, and his B.S.B. from Emporia State University.

Danielle Packer will co-teach Juvenile Offender with Mickie Brassel next spring. Ms. Packer currently is a partner at Brassel & Packer, LLC. Her areas of practice include adoption, divorce, paternity, same-sex parentage, guardianships, child in need of care, and probate and estate planning. She is licensed to practice in the State of Kansas, the United States District Court of the State of KS, and Prairie Band Potawatomi Nation Judicial Center. She received her J.D./M.S.W. dual degree from Washburn University School of Law and her BS degree from the University of Kansas.

NEW COURSES

LW 743 Advanced Water Law. This one-credit course exposes students in greater depth to topics that rarely receive coverage in Water Law: interstate litigation (a subject that is of particular importance to Kansas), groundwater law and policy, federal reserved water rights, international relations in water (including water treaties and conflicts) and how water quality and water quantity issues inter-relate. Prerequisite: LW 742 Water Rights. Satisfies Perspectives requirement. Graded. 1 credit hour.

LW 870 Commercial Law. The course studies the financing and distribution of goods from manufacturer to their ultimate consumer. The course will emphasize the financing of sales transactions (article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code). The course additionally will introduce students the traditional processes for payment of sales-generated obligations (Articles 3, 4, and 5 of the Uniform Commercial Code). The course finally will provide an introduction to the growing world of online sales and provide an introduction to blockchain and the developing “lex digitalis” or commercial law of the internet. Prerequisite: Contracts. Graded. 4 credit hours.

LW 709 Employee Benefits Law. As Americans increasingly rely on employers to provide post-employment income security (retirement benefits) and other benefits such as health insurance (welfare benefits), employee benefit law remains a central feature of American employment law. This course provides a survey of the specialized employee benefit plans governed by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (“ERISA”) and the Tax Code. In addition, this course will explore the rules governing coverage, vesting, funding, fiduciary standards, claims administration, remedies, and preemption of state law. While there will be some exploration of the tax benefits and consequences of these plans, no prior knowledge of taxation law is assumed or required. Prerequisites: None. Graded. 2 credit hours.

LW 950 Introduction to Nonprofit Law. Nonprofit organizations play a vital role in the social development and economic stability of American society. This intersession course will provide a foundation to understanding nonprofit organizations by examining state and federal laws generally applicable to nonprofit organizations. Topics include state formation of not-for-profit corporations; federal laws governing tax-exempt nonprofit organizations; nonprofit governance models; fiduciary duties of board of directors; state and federal prohibitions and limitations for nonprofits; ethical considerations, and best practices. This course will also address the practical aspects of representing and advising nonprofit organizations. As many nonprofits are resource poor, attorneys are often asked to represent nonprofits on a pro bono basis. Unfortunately, many attorneys are unprepared to offer competent representation. This course will provide a basic foundation for the legal knowledge, skill, and preparation reasonably necessary for such representation. Prerequisites: None. Graded. 1 credit hour.

LW 798 Legal History Seminar. This seminar provides a substantial introduction to Anglo-American legal history, with an emphasis on three inter-related topics: (1) the development of the common law and of natural law theories as competing epistemological systems with political and constitutional consequences during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; (2) the development of property law and political rights during the nineteenth century, with special attention to American slavery and westward expansion; and (3) the rise of the public (the “public sphere,” the public interest, the public trust) as legal and historical concepts with profound consequences in environmental and natural resources law during the twentieth century. Across these topics, the seminar will invite comparisons between the ways in which historians argue about the past and the ways in which legal academics, lawyers, and judges argue about common law precedent, constitutional interpretation, and statutory construction. Central to the seminar is sustained attention to the relationship between what is legal and what is legitimate. Prerequisites: Property, Constitutional Law I and II. Satisfies Perspectives requirement. Graded. 2 credit hours.

LW 807 Regulating the Risk of Technological Disruption. This seminar course will provide an introduction to the legal problems posed by the increasing risks associated with technological disruption in such areas as cyber-security and cyber-war, artificial intelligence (particularly artificial general intelligence), genetic engineering (particularly use of CRISPR), and geo-engineering solutions to climate change. The course will involve studying the nature of those technological innovations that pose the most significant risks, the various approaches to trying to regulate such innovation, and the various legal problems being encountered in such efforts. Prerequisites: None. Satisfies Perspectives requirement. Graded. 2 credit hours.

COURSE ANNOUNCEMENTS

NOTE: LW 756 Clinic: Litigation will NOT be offered during the summer 2019 session.

NOTE: Secured Transactions and Payment Systems will no longer be offered. Instead, the new course, Commercial Law, will combine aspects of both classes with a heavy emphasis on subjects covered in the former Secured Transactions class.

Students who have a GPA under 2.6 after their first two semesters of law school will be required to take two Multiple Assessment Courses as soon as practicable, one of which must be Multistate Legal Analysis. Multiple Assessment Courses are foundation courses that are open to all students, which include exercises, quizzes, or other activities that are designed to provide students, and the faculty members teaching the courses, opportunities for feedback throughout the semester. Additionally, students who have a GPA under 2.6 may not enroll in more than 16 hours per semester until they raise their GPA over 2.6.

UPPER-LEVEL ELECTIVE CURRICULUM

RECOMMENDED FOUNDATION COURSES

The faculty strongly encourages enrollment in the following foundation courses. These courses are foundations for other advanced electives and are considered part of the core of a well-rounded legal education. Students are urged to enroll in these courses, along with the required courses in Constitutional Law II, Evidence, Professional Responsibility, and Criminal Procedure in the second year of law study. Enrolling in these courses in the second year will not only lay the foundation for more advanced courses in the third year, but also result in fewer conflicts in scheduling classes and exams in both the second and third years

Administrative Law
Business Associations
Commercial Law
Decedents' Estates and Trusts
Family Law

Pretrial Advocacy – Civil
Pretrial Advocacy - Criminal
Public International Law
Real Estate Transactions
Taxation of Individual Income

ADDITIONAL COURSE SUGGESTIONS

The following additional courses are not as universally considered a part of the core curriculum, but they are nevertheless important classes for many students for the reasons described below. They are also commonly tested on state bar examinations. Thus, while these are not classes that all students would typically take, they are classes to which students should give careful consideration in planning their upper-level curriculum. Remedies and Conflict of Laws are courses best studied in the third year of law school. The others are feasible in either the second or third year.

Conflict of Laws – The heart of the Conflicts class is the problem of choosing the law to apply to a transaction or occurrence that crosses state lines. Many transactions or occurrences are entirely local. Often, when a transaction or occurrence touches more than one state, the laws of the involved states happen to be in agreement. But a growing number of multi-state transactions or occurrences involve conflicts between the potentially applicable laws. When this happens, the resulting problems are often quite difficult to resolve. For students who may engage in a practice representing clients involved in activities on a multi-state or multinational basis, Conflict of Laws can be a very important class.

Remedies - Although the Remedies class looks at legal, equitable and restitutionary remedies, the most important reason to take the class is that it is the only opportunity in law school to obtain a broad exposure to equity practice and the underlying doctrines of equity that apply to equitable remedies such as injunctions and specific performance. Knowledge of Remedies is important in all areas of practice.

Prerequisites

One factor students should consider in course selection is whether a desired course requires a prerequisite course. Prerequisites are listed at the end of course descriptions on the web site course descriptions.
